

HOW-TO:

Cite a Web Page

When is a Web Page just a Web Page?

When it isn't a Newspaper or Magazine article, an encyclopedia article (Reference Source) or anything beside a plain old website page.

Follow these step-by-step directions to cite your Web Page:

1. SELECT THE CITATION TYPE

- Say where it is (Website) and what it is (Web Page)

2. IDENTIFY ALL REQUIRED CITATION ELEMENTS

Sometimes you have to look hard

The screenshot shows a web browser window with the URL kidshealth.org/en/teens/reboot.html?WT.ac=t-ra circled in red. A red box labeled "URL" points to it. The website logo "TeensHealth from Nemours" is circled in red, with a red box labeled "Name of the website" pointing to it. The article title "Technology: 5 Ways to Reboot Yourself" is circled in red, with a red box labeled "Web page or document/article title" pointing to it. The article content includes a "Listen" button, a quote "Lol...Omg...Idk: Why am I so tired?", and text about embarrassing text messages and sleep deprivation.

The screenshot shows the footer of the article. The date "Date reviewed: October 2013" is circled in red, with a red box labeled "Date of publication" pointing to it. The publisher "Nemours" is circled in red, with a red box labeled "Publisher" pointing to it. The footer also includes a "MORE ON THIS TOPIC" section with links to related articles, contact information, and social media links.
